Chemicals legislation: the REACH system

The Council reached a political agreement on the draft regulation for the registration, evaluation, authorisation and restriction of chemicals (REACH), and establishing a European chemicals agency.

The Council held a policy debate, on the basis of a compromise text elaborated by the United Kingdom Presidency (15155/05) and additional proposals presented by the Presidency directly to the Council, before unanimously agreeing on a draft text, setting out the contents of its common position.

The Council will formally adopt its common position at a later session once the legal text has been finalised. The common position will be forwarded to the European Parliament for a second reading under the co-decision procedure.

The main issues of the debate were "authorisation" and "substitution".

Whereas some delegations stressed the importance of providing for strong incentives or even obligations for substitution of dangerous substances, other delegations were worried by the impact on industry if excessive conditions for authorisation were to be adopted. The agreement by the Council strikes a balance between these different views. The proposal as agreed provides that authorisations should not be granted on the grounds of adequate control in the case of substances that are persistent, bioaccumulative and toxic (PBT) or very persistent, very bioaccumulative (vPvB). For substances where it is not possible to determine safe thresholds with current methods, the proposal provides for a review (via a "comitology" procedure) within 12 months after entry into force of the regulation based on work in the REACH implementation projects (RIPs). In addition, it was agreed that applications for authorisations should always include an analysis of possible alternatives by the registrant.

The Council examined other points related to:

- Exemptions from registration, where a review of the list of exemptions within 12 months after the entry into force is foreseen.
- Substances in articles, where registration deadlines for substances intentionally released from articles are brought into line with substances on their own or in preparations.

- The adaptation, of the definition of existing substances (“phase-in substances”) in order to cover all substances listed in the European inventory of existing commercial chemical substances (EINECS).
- The possibility to appoint a third party to act on behalf of a company to keep the identity of registrants confidential under certain conditions.
- The proposal to encourage innovation by softening the requirements for obtaining an exemption from registration for substances subject to research and development.
- The information to be made available on the internet by the agency in order to facilitate registration, inter alia for SMEs.

Background

REACH goes back to the Commission’s White paper on a “Strategy for a future chemicals policy” (2001), which drew up a new approach to the EU's chemicals policy, addressing the following objectives:

- Protection of human health and the environment.
- Maintenance and enhancement of the competitiveness of the EU chemicals industry.
- Prevention of the fragmentation of the internal market.
- Increased transparency.
- Integration of non-animal testing.
- Conformity with the EU's international obligations under the WTO.

The Commission adopted the REACH proposal in October 2003.

The European Parliament delivered its opinion at first reading on 17 November 2005.

The Council held several policy debates throughout the preparatory work on REACH in order to give guidance to the examination of the file, most recently, the Environment Council on 17 October and the Competitiveness Council on 29 November held policy debates leading up to today's agreement.
