To ensure the fairness and credibility of such claims, Article 6(2) of Directive 2005/29/EC should be amended to prohibit such claims, following a case-by-case assessment, when they are based solely on carbon offsetting schemes or are not supported by clear, objective and verifiable commitments and targets given by the trader, including a detailed and realistic implementation plan to achieve the objectives set. That plan should include concrete and verifiable interim targets consistent with achieving the trader's long-term commitment, underpinned by a sufficient budget and based only on existing economically and technically viable technologies. The implementation plan, as well as the progress made throughout its implementation, should be made publicly available online and regularly reported upon by the trader. Claims should also be supported by an independent monitoring system to monitor the progress of the implementation plan, the trader's commitments and targets. Claims related to future environmental performance should not be used on product level, as they could mislead as to the current environmental performance of the concrete product in question.

The displaying of sustainability labels remains possible without a certification scheme where such labels are established by a public authority, or in case of additional forms of expression and presentation of food in accordance with Article 35 of Regulation (EU) No 1169/2011.* This rule complements point 4 of Annex I to Directive 2005/29/EC which prohibits claiming that a trader, the commercial practices of a trader, or a product has been approved, endorsed or authorised by a public or private body when it has not, or making such a claim without complying with the terms of the approval, endorsement or authorisation.

Justification

Carbon offsetting schemes are currently unregulated and consumers have no means to verify whether they are really robust and reliable. Claims based on such schemes can also mislead the consumer about the product in question. Therefore, claims on future environmental performance based solely on such claims should be banned. Other claims related to future performance must be sufficiently substantiated.

Amendment

7a. The Commission is empowered to adopt delegated acts in accordance with Article 16 a to supplement this Directive by establishing minimum requirements in relation to sustainability labels and sustainability information tools. When adopting the delegated act, the Commission shall take into account publicly available award criteria, developed in an independent process and going beyond what is required by Union law with an impartial control procedure, including third party verification and transparency of the scheme owner. The Commission shall ensure accessibility to all market players, procedural transparency for consumers, scientific robustness and stakeholder relevance, and put in place compliance and dispute resolution mechanisms as well as a periodic revision of the award criteria. If a sustainability label or a sustainability information tool is focused on one particular environmental aspect, this shall be clearly and prominently communicated to consumers. For the sake of transparency, all pre-approved sustainability labels and sustainability information tools shall be published in a publicly available online register, which is to be updated regularly by the competent national authorities.

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

Studies have demonstrated that European consumers take the environmental impact into account when purchasing a product. They are ready to pay more for more sustainable products. Market operators reflect such trends. Consumers are though often misled by different claims related to environmental performance of goods and services. The Rapporteur therefore welcomes the European Commission proposal to regulate the market to ensure true and easily accessible sustainability information.

The Rapporteur proposes though measures to further strengthen the proposal. The Rapporteur suggest to better regulate sustainability labels and sustainability information tools, as well as environmental claims. The Rapporteur introduces an obligation for pre-approval of sustainability labels and sustainability information tools by a competent national authority in line with a framework to be set by the Commission through implementing and delegated acts.

On the environmental claims, the Rapporteur proposes to ban future environmental claims based solely on carbon offsetting schemes, since such schemes are unregulated and cannot be verified by consumers. Other future environmental claims must be adequately substantiated by a feasible implementation plan and verifiable targets, and backed by sufficient budget and resources. Those plans must be publicly available, regularly updated and monitored by an independent body. The Rapporteur considers that claims related to future environmental performance should not be used on the product level as they can mislead the consumer on the current environmental performance of the products in question. Additionally, the Rapporteur sets a ban on claims that state that a good has a neutral or positive greenhouse gas emissions' impact on the environment as that is impossible to achieve from the scientific point of view.

Furthermore, more than 80 percent<sup>1</sup> of EU consumers are interested in the durability of products. They experience though difficulties in finding relevant information. The Rapporteur therefore proposes to introduce a guaranteed lifespan label that reflects both, the minimum period the consumer is covered by a free legal guarantee of two years as well as an indication of the lifespan of the products. The producers and traders can prolong this guarantee beyond two years, but they can indicate it on a label only if it is without additional cost for the consumer and if it applies to the whole product.

To achieve a truly sustainable economy, it is crucial to encourage the repair of products. Consumers should therefore be informed before the purchase of a product on the availability and affordability of spare parts necessary to repair it, including the length of the period during which spare parts and accessories are available, the procedure of ordering them, about the availability of a user and repair manual and repair tools and services. The Rapporteur suggest to ban the marketing of goods which do not allow repair in accordance with legal requirements.

The Rapporteur believes that a complete ban on all forms of premature obsolescence should be imposed, ranging from software features that limit the durability of products and stimulate the purchase of a new product to hardware features introduced with a similar purpose.

In order to make it easier for consumers to take informed decisions about software updates and contribute to the durability of their products, the Rapporteur proposes to unbundle security updates that are necessary for the functioning of the device from other types of updates. All updates that negatively impact the device should be banned. Furthermore, consumers should be informed in a clear and understandable manner if an update is necessary to keep the product in conformity.
